

Love & Affection: Julia
 [JUNE 26th 2018]

The sense of urgency for the first time in my life, to indeed have an journal of somesort is unprecedented. It was not just any journal, but the journal has been made, for the purpose of a girl named Julia and my potential interactions with her—starting from this moment of time, june twenty-six of twenty-eighteen. I am a person of mind, who indeeds like being around groups of people—especially females—but for the most part, the existence of Julia has changed who I am tremendously.

As for how it all begin, one day (which is clearly today), I was minding my own business when I notice the presence of Julia within royale. I decided to hit her up because I do not see what would be the issue of talking to new people and perhaps having a potential “friendship” if I fuck with them like that. Anyways, I hit her up and what I notice is this is someone I could easily get along with. I knew she was someone that I will love eventually, perhaps feelings and whatnot because I do not know who would not want someone like that in their life. I always thought there was something special about her, especially if I am writing a journal just about her when I do not do that for anyone nor have I done it before—which indeeds mean I saw something in her that was unique than everyone else and I clearly admire it. Having this journal is something I clearly thought was a sign of things to come, and I was thinking this journal will never be read by anyone—as for one, I do not think anyone will take this seriously and I do not think Julia would concur with how I potentially think of our interactions and would want anything to do with me in this sense.

Just for now, I am learning to know her better—because the more I know, the more I understand her. The more I understand her, the more I know what to think of her. I literally could not see this and make it run away, so I already want to be her best friend, a person she closes with, a person who is there for her when she needs it, a person who she looks at different from others. So when I was talking to her, I thought of this idea, where a heart emoji of her choice will be at the end of each message we sent to each other. It is something rarely anyone would be asked from me— but the purpose was the yellow heart emoji will recall the day every since I met her and it was supposed to be a remark or bookmark of somesort to appreciate how much I care and think of her already—but I thought I wanted more than that, I wanted to build upon it and see where it takes me.*